Dear Government: Why Won't You Answer?

On April 13, 2000 Robert Schulz of the We The People Foundation For Constitutional Education and former IRS agent Joseph Banister met at the White House with Jason Furman, Senior Director and Senior Economic Advisor of the National Economic Council, with their videographer, while a delegation representing all 50 States waited outside. Schulz and Banister delivered a Remonstrance to Furman for President Bill Clinton regarding the unconstitutionality of the federal income tax amendment (16th), and the illegality of the operations of the IRS, along with a substantial body of credible evidence and an invitation to have the Administration's most knowledgeable people on the subject participate in a June 29 conference to debate the issues. Mr. Furman promised to have his staff, White House lawyers, and historians review the evidence. He also expressed agreement of the idea of the Administration participating in the June conference. On April 27, Schulz sent a letter to Furman respectfully requesting that he supply We The People Foundation For Constitutional Education, by the end of May with the names of the people who would be representing the Administration at the conference. On May 19, Schulz called Furman to confirm that everything was "on track," and was routed to Mr. Furman's voice mail. Furman did not return the call. On June 2 Schulz called again. This time he spoke with Furman who told We The People Foundation For Constitutional Education that the legality of the income tax was not a priority item in the Clinton Administration.

The Constitution of the United States is all that stands between the people and tyranny. What does a free people do when faced with evidence of ratification fraud? The Constitution tells the people to address their grievances with their government. But, what does a free people do when their government doesn't listen?

There are major questions about the legality of the federal income tax system and the operations of the IRS, supported by and derived from bona fide research by competent individuals from all over the country. The evidence is very strong and persuasive; it is increasing, and it warrants attention. The Foundation has tried repeatedly to arrange objective conferences at which these challenges would be answered and ratified by government experts. The conferences were held at the National Press Club, in the government's own backyard. The government has now failed to respond to invitations to 3 conferences in a year.

Written material available from the government that purports to address the allegations and citizens is evasive and non-responsive. Information from the Congressional Research Service actually confirms some allegations. The government's persistent evasion of the income tax issues has reached the point at which Robert Schulz and Joe Banister met with Jason Furman in the White House, they also met on April 13, with Dr. William Koetzle, the legislative director for House Speaker Dennis J. Hastert and Keith Hennessy, policy director for Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott. Copies of Remonstrance were delivered to both. Both Koetzle and Hennessy promised to have their staffs and the Committee and the Senate Finance Committee review the evidence in support of our evidence. They, too, were unable to having appropriate responses. They both received letters similar to Furman's letter of April 27. Followups by phone reached only "voice mail," with neither man returning our calls. On June 2, more calls were placed. This time, Koetzle responded. He had forgotten all about our visit, and had done nothing which was promised in that meeting. Koetzle and Hennessy asked if they something. Schulz asked if they could expect a formal reply from the Speaker. Koetzle replied, "No. We receive tens of thousands of letters. We can't respond to them all."

 We have put three questions before our elected officials. These are three questions that Americans have been asking since 1985, and our government and our elected officials have not answered them. We are asking the National Press Club, but to the people whom they represent. This is unacceptable. Here are the issues we wish to debate and address in our public forum at the National Press Club in Washington, DC, on June 29. All who have an expertise on the Constitution are invited to attend and be heard.

AN OPEN INVITATION TO ALL MEMBERS OF CONGRESS, PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES, CONSTITUTIONAL SCHOLARS, PROFESSORS, HISTORIANS, JUDGES, ATTORNEYS, COLUMNISTS
 ... and anyone else who has spoken publicly about the unconstitutionality or illegality of the income tax and wishes to argue in support of the three propositions. Please contact us and tell us you wish to participate in the June 29th conference.

As Americans, we expect our elected representatives, whether in the Congress or in the White House, to respond to our needs and answer the legitimate questions that are placed before them by the electorate. Over the past decade, a number of groups have placed formal written questions regarding the legitimacy of the federal income tax. Americans from all of the 50 States are now tired of being deliberately ignored by their elected officials on this issue.
