Re: Invitation to Speak at IRS WALK-AROUND

Dear Commissioner Rossotti,

On Monday, April 9, 2001, more than 1,040 citizens from many parts of the country will be walking around the IRS headquarters building complex in Washington DC, two abreast, a yard between pairs.

The citizens participating in the WALK-AROUND will be respectful and well-mannered. They will, however, be wearing navy blue windbreakers with the words TYRANNY RESPONSE TEAM written on the back.

The purpose of this letter is to invite you to speak to the citizens at 11:30 am. We respectfully request that you address the allegations which have been presented to you by Joseph Banister, William Benson, David Bosset, William Conklin, Larken Rose, and others, including this organization during the last two years. We invite you to explain the agency's position and to tell the citizens assembled when experts at the IRS will be available to meet with tax researchers in a public forum to expose their errors and to show them and explain the law that requires most Americans to file a tax return and to have the income tax withheld from the money they earn.

We will have a microphone set up near the main entrance of the building with speakers strategically located around the building complex so that all participating citizens will be able to hear your remarks.

Needless to say, the WALK-AROUND comes as a result of the agency's continued evasion of opportunities we have provided over the past two years at the National Press Club and Hilton Crystal City to discuss the allegations of fraud and illegal operations of the income tax system. The allegations include the following: 1) there is NO LAW that requires most Americans to file a tax return, pay the federal income tax nor have the tax withheld from their earnings; 2) in 1913, the 16th Amendment (the "income tax" Amendment) was fraudulently and illegally declared to be ratified by a lame-duck Secretary of State just days before leaving office; 3) people who file a Form 1040 "voluntarily" waive their 5th Amendment (Miranda) right not to bear witness against themselves; 4) the IRS routinely violates citizens' 4th Amendment rights against illegal search and seizure without a warrant issued by a court upon probable cause and supported by oath and affirmation; and 5) the IRS, as standard operating procedure, routinely violates citizens' due process rights in its administrative procedures and operates far outside the law.

The research by Benson, Banister, Bosset, Kotmair and others provides a substantial amount of very credible evidence that since 1913 the Executive and Legislative branches have been cooperating in a collective decision to deprive the People of a large percentage of the fruits of their labor by enforcing laws and regulations that do not exist under the Internal Revenue Code. The evidence shows that the Code and regulations have intentionally been written in such a deceptive way as to obscure and obfuscate so as to give citizens the false impression that they are required to pay.

A growing number of people have become familiar with the facts of this research and now realize that Congress is prohibited by the Constitution from requiring individual citizens of the fifty states to file and pay the income tax or a social security tax as they currently operate. More and more citizens now believe that it is precisely because of the absence of proper constitutional authority that Congress has not passed any law requiring most Americans to file and pay an income tax.

Yet, a growing number of people are losing their homes, going to prison and otherwise being subjected to financial penalties and emotional stress for either falling behind on their payments or legitimately deciding that they do not have to pay.

So far, the IRS has responded with increased threats and saber rattling, but with no attempts to discuss in a rational way the allegations about the laws and regulations. Obviously, the current situation should not continue. We need to get to the truth of the matter.

Very truly yours,

Robert L. Schulz
